Mind, Body, and Soul:

Sustainable Teaching in (Post-) Pandemic Times

JUNE 11-13, 2021

These tenets lie at the heart of sustainable teaching – a mindset with a set of accompanying practices that enable educators to flourish and heal. At this experiential conference, you will acquire practical tools for centering your mind, bolstering your body, and reviving your spirit. You will explore, in professional community, how to grow as a social justice advocate and ally without sacrificing your own well-being in the process. You will rekindle the spark of hope you need, to keep doing the work you are called to do, even in these trying times.

REGISTER BY MAY 28 AT nwprmrc.com

$75 - FRIDAY & SATURDAY: includes virtual “People’s Supper” on Friday PLUS all Saturday sessions, including keynote by Dr. April Baker-Bell

$25 – SUNDAY: Half-day immersive workshop with Dr. Ricki Ginsberg and Vincente Perez

KEYNOTE SPEAKER: Dr. April Baker-Bell

Dr. Baker-Bell is an award-winning transdisciplinary teacher-researcher-activist and an Associate Professor at Michigan State University. Her expertise includes antiracist writing, critical media literacies, Black feminist-womanist storytelling, and self-preservation for Black women in academia. Her book, Linguistic Justice: Black Language, Literacy, Identity, and Pedagogy, won the 2020 NCTE George Orwell Book Award.

DEADLINES: Register by Fri., June 4 / Learn more at nwprmrc.com.